Principal Notes

As the year is coming to a close we are reminding our students and their families of the PBIS expectations. Our PBIS team recently sent home a letter, along with the matrix for families to review. We are asking for your partnership in teaching the expectations to the children. You can do this by using the vocabulary listed on the matrix. For instance you might say, "Johnny, thank you for taking out the garbage. This shows me you are a very responsible young man." This example is called Specific Positive Feedback (SPF), which is what we expect our teachers to use when discussing behavior with your children.

Additionally, each month the PBIS team sits down to review schoolwide data. Based off of our data, we will prepare lessons focused on those problem areas. For example, this month we learned students are having difficulty with respect in the classroom and at lunch/recess. The team prepared the following Cool Tools (15 minute lessons based on the Social Emotional Learning Standards) focused on managing emotions when angry and strategies to cool down when feeling upset. The PBIS team hopes this will help to reduce behaviors and give students strategies for future use.
