Village Board reviews first fiscal year financials

By Seth Hancock

The Village Board of Trustees was updated on Bartlett's finances at its meeting on Tuesday, July 17.

Todd Dowden, finance director, gave the first treasurer's report for the new fiscal year as of May 2018.

"We're still working on wrapping up our last fiscal year," Dowden said. "Our auditors have been coming out the last week of July, so these are preliminary numbers."

Total revenues to the village were at $4 million and total expenditures $2.8 million. The revenue side represents 4.3 percent of a budgeted $93 million whereas at the same time last year they were at 3 percent of the previous budget, and expenditures were at 2.6 percent of a budgeted $104.5 million while last year they were at 2.4 percent at the same time.

The largest category, the general fund, showed $1.6 million in revenues (7.3 percent of $22.3 million budgeted) and $1.6 million in expenditures (6.7 percent of $24 million budgeted).

The largest major revenue category for the first report of the fiscal year was water charges which brought in $770,960 representing 7.8 percent of a budgeted $9.9 million. The remaining 11 categories ranged from $565,171 in income taxes to $11,223 in electric utility taxes.

The golf fund came in with a net income of $126,534 ($260,842 in revenues, $134,308 in expenditures) while the village budgeted a net income of $50,063 for the new fiscal year.

Dowden also gave an update on the motor fuel tax (MFT) revenues for the month of April and sales tax revenues for the month of March.

Regarding the sales tax piece, Dowden said: "For the month of March, we received $167,000 which was $7,900 over the same month last year. We should end up just over our budget of $2.4 million for the year, so we're looking on track for the sales tax."

Dowden said that regarding the MFT the village "received $94,336 which was just up a little over $4,000" from the same time last year. Dowden added the MFT did finish "slightly under budget" by $5,560.

Lions Day Dash events set for Sunday, Aug. 26

By Seth Hancock

The Bartlett Lions Club will be hosting its 14th annual Lions Day Dash this weekend. The 5K and 10K runs/walks will take place on Sunday, Aug. 26 starting at 8 a.m., and the start and end will be on East Railroad Avenue according to the route map provided to the Village Board of Trustees.

The board approved the club's parade permit request at its meeting on July 17.

From the Bartlett Lions Club website: "The Dash has become a neighborhood tradition. The race was previously known as the Bartlett Lions Labor Day Dash. It is now the Lions Dash. Races start and finish across from Bartlett Village Hall in the Town Center area and the course takes runners and walkers through the lovely, tree-lined streets of Bartlett. Funds raised are used by the Bartlett Lions for those in need in our community."

Carrie Sypherd, on behalf of the club, sent a letter to the village stating the Lions have "hired the DJ, ordered the medals and [T-shirts] and have the liability waiver and amplifier permit."

In a memo to the village board Joey Dienberg, administrative intern, wrote: "The route for the race will remain the same as last year and has been approved by the Bartlett Police Department. The Bartlett Lions Club will notify residents near the Town Center of the race as they have done in the past."

Parks website redesign given initial approval

By Joe Hyland

At its Tuesday, Aug. 14 committee workshop meeting, the Park District Board of Commissioners gave its unanimous approval to a redesign of the district's website.

Superintendent of Recreation Kimberly Dasbach noted in a written report that the district had allocated $30,000 for this purpose in its Fiscal Year 2018-2019 budget. She said that the district had sent out a request for proposals in July and had received a total of four replies that were deemed to meet the district's needs with respect to the website.

There was an extremely wide range in costs between the vendors who were considered for the project. Estimates ranged from $119,685 from Ameex to $18,900 from Weblinx, Inc.

"We've worked with Weblinx Incorporated over the years," said Commissioner Diana Gunsteen, reading from Dasbach's report.

The report also noted that Weblinx had done the work on developing the district's current website as well as the reconfiguration work on its microsites and hosting. It said that the company's latest sites have what it termed "a modern and clean look that matches our future vision, as well as the enhanced SEO (search engine optimization) functions and analytics."

The report said that the redesign will be focused on a mobile first approach that will be geared largely towards the small screen views that users of tablets and smartphones need. There is currently no timeline set for the development process and the date the new site would go live has not yet been determined.

The proposal will still need final approval by the full board at its regular monthly meeting, which is set for Tuesday, Aug. 28.

Park Board updated on Life Center closure

By Joe Hyland

At the Park District Board of Commissioners' Tuesday, Aug. 14 committee workshop meeting, Director of Special Facilities Lynsey Heathcote reported on the results of the Life Center's annual maintenance shut down. The center was closed between Monday, July 30 and Friday, Aug. 3 for the process.

"Just a real thorough cleaning of the whole facility," said Heathcote.

In addition to the cleaning, the facility was painted and reorganized. Heathcote said that staff also took the opportunity to install a number of pieces of new equipment that were purchased to replace some older gear.

"It's getting a lot of use, a lot of attention already," Heathcote said.

Heathcote said that there are still three pieces of equipment that have yet to be delivered and installed. She said that the installation should be completed by the end of August.

Heathcote also noted, in a written report, that staff had received a number of compliments on the cleaning and the new equipment. In particular, the Hoist Motion Cage workout machine has been very well-received.

The report noted that next on the agenda is the annual maintenance shut-down for Splash Central. This will take place between Monday, Aug. 20 and Friday, Aug. 31. The indoor pool will also be closed for cleaning and routine maintenance during the same time frame. Heathcote noted that members will be able to use the Park Place Fitness Center and Aquatic Center in Streamwood during the shut-down.

"We have a kind of reciprocal arrangement with Streamwood where our members can use their facility and theirs can use ours (during shut-downs)," Heathcote said.

Love may be blind; beauty is defined by beholder

It's been said that love is blind but one might wonder about that phrase. There are many phrases similar to this one and they can all mean something different to each person. For instance, there are couples who are married or dating and are very different from one another. Most people who are looking for a mate seem to first seek outside appeal such as good looks. We have all seen couples who couldn't possibly belong together because he may be very handsome and she might be considered unattractive to our eyes, yet, to him she is the most beautiful woman on the planet. The same goes for him where he may not have obvious good looks but she thinks he is the next best thing to Brat Pitt.

Take two people who saw each other every day and eventually ended up together. Tory was employed by a couple as a nanny and worked very hard taking care of the couple's three children. Tory was just a tiny woman, barely four feet tall. She was considered by many as unattractive and some even referred to her as downright ugly; however, there were several stores Tory had to pass on the way to the grocery store where there was a sale on fresh chicken and the family wanted her to pick some up. On those days Tory would take the same route leaving the home where she stayed and worked and walked to town for that chicken.

Every day the store owner, a very attractive young man, watched as Tory walked by carrying a chicken in her basket and greeted her as she passed. Soon they started talking for a brief time and little by little the man named Olaf, a gentle man started asking questions as to where she was going to take the chicken and why she would go to the store every day. Tory was very shy but explained that the people she worked for asked her to pick up the chicken and freeze it. This went on for a long time and finally Olaf felt so sorry for the girl he asked if he could give her a ride to and from the store. Tory thanked the nice man and told him she didn't mind walking.

They continued to speak whenever she walked by and Olaf would stand by the door of his store waiting for her. Olaf had a girl he had been dating for about three years and Sarah was really beautiful. Everyone envied Olaf for his excellent taste. One might wonder why Olaf would be so attracted to a woman that people considered unattractive and men never asked out on dates, but this handsome man who not only would be able to ask out any girl he wanted and was also a very rich man because his family owned several stores, was drawn to Tory.

One day Olaf decided to ask if he could take Tory on a date for dinner. Tory was surprised but accepted Olaf's offer. Within months the two fell deeply in love and married in a very romantic setting. Olaf's parents couldn't understand why their handsome son would dump his former girlfriend Sarah for an unattractive creature, as they called her, but there was nothing they could say to change their son's mind. Years later Olaf and Tory had three beautiful children that were asked to pose for a magazine while on a trip to Portugal. Yes, the couple had three gorgeous girls with hair like angels and eyes like deep blue water.

Society is full of images in magazines and on the movie screen that seem to set the standard for what makes a person attractive. A friend of mine does not find Brad Pitt attractive because she prefers men with more rugged looks while another friend prefers older men with salt and pepper hair. It is said that beauty is in the eyes of the beholder which is true, but once the eyes notice someone it is the heart that finds true beauty and love.

U-46 board responds to more reports of bullying

By Seth Hancock

Is there a need for more oversight on what is occurring at School District U-46 schools and how administrators handle incidents?

Board member Jeanette Ward asked if board members were able to go to district schools and observe at a Board of Education meeting on Monday, Aug. 6.

U-46 CEO Tony Sanders said: "We've not had a protocol specifically for board members just to show up to schools and observe unannounced, but we have had opportunities for board members to visit schools."

Ward's question stemmed from public comments made that evening by parents of Wayne Elementary School students as well as a grandparent of a bullied student that went unaddressed. Ward also noted that earlier this year, several parents of Bartlett Elementary School students addressed similar concerns to the board.

The Wayne parents described how their son, a kindergartner at the time, was punched, kicked and choked at recess but when they tried to address their concerns they were dismissed and handled inappropriately. They said their request this year to have their children attend Bartlett's Sycamore Trails Elementary School, which they said was closer to their home, was denied.

The mother of the boy said: "Contrary to the U-46 mission, Wayne was not a great place for my son to learn."

The boy's father said the reason given to them for not allowing the transfer to Sycamore Trails was because his "son was not at Wayne last year," but he noted they pulled their son from Wayne to attend private school because of the district's lack of response.

The grandfather said the district's response was to use "bullying tactics" itself saying "ignoring a constituent's request is a subtle and maybe not so subtle way of showing who is boss, the imbalance of power tactic often used by a bully." He added: "Of course it's quite possible this lack of response was not intentional and was just an oversight or a mistake or a lack of understanding the serious nature of the request, in other words, incompetence."

Ward said she would like to observe some of the elementary schools during recess and requested that a policy be drafted, if necessary, to allow such observations from board members.

Miguel Rodriguez, chief legal officer, said: "There is a policy that does mention board members visiting schools, but I would imagine the board would have to set some parameters to figure out what the purpose of the visit might be."

The board's policy 2.020 does list "Visiting the District's schools" as one of the board member's powers and duties, but no guidelines for visits is included.

Board member Sue Kerr said she's visited some schools in the past and said "as a courtesy to our principals and our teachers, I think we should at least alert people that we'll be coming because quite often they want to treat board members well."

Ward responded: "I'm not suggesting showing up unannounced. I just would like to visit some of these schools where we've heard these kinds of reports. It doesn't have to be unannounced."

Donna Smith, the board's president, said she didn't think a policy would need to be drafted and that such visits are allowed now, and Ward responded: "Ok, I'll start setting up some appointments."

Kerr said that she's had principals contact her to let her know she could call them to set up visits to which Ward asked if they should go directly to principals to make requests? Sanders said: "Typically the request will go through my office and we'll do the alert for you."

Board member Phil Costello asked for clarification to make sure no policy was needed and Ward was content with the response. Ward said: "That's fine with me. I have no problem with providing advanced notice."

Kerr said she would like to attend and observe some schools as well because she's "curious about some of the programs."

Bartlett soccer maintains high hopes for new season

By Seth Hancock

The Bartlett soccer team has high hopes for the 2018 season as their schedule kicks off this week.

The Hawks were 5-14-4 overall last year and 0-5 in the Upstate Eight Conference Valley Division. This year, the UEC will be newly aligned with 10 total teams and no divisions with the departure of four teams and addition of one, Glenbard South.

There have been struggles for a young Bartlett squad since the program's first state trip in 2015 when it finished 17-9-2. The Hawks went 1-14-4 the following year before the 5-14-4 campaign in Bartlett coach Victor Marquez's first season at the helm.

With the young squad gaining valuable experience the past two seasons, Marquez said the goals are to win the UEC title and making a deep postseason run.

Marquez said he wants to "take the team one step at a time, game by game, to first win the conference and then move into regionals and continue to approach it one game at a time in order to advance to sectionals, super-sectional and state."

The team's strength will be "team cohesiveness" according to Marquez as the Hawks have several strong returners.

Some key returners include seniors Austin Cichon (defender), Kevin Nava (defender) and Rudy Reyes (forward) as well as juniors Hernan Garcia (forward), Nicolas Gomez (midfielder) and Jeremy Taylor (goalkeeper).

Some newcomers include a Wheaton North transfer, senior forward Andres Noguera, and an exchange student from Morocco, junior forward Amine Medmoun. Another newcomer to watch will be junior defender Ethan Sproule.

"We want to continue to solidify our defensive game, put more high pressure on opponents and finish offensive plays with a shot on goal in order to increase our scoring opportunities and transforming them into goals," Marquez said.

The Hawks open the season with the program's first two games at the new Bartlett Activity Complex with a non-conference match against McHenry on Monday, Aug. 20 and an UEC contest against Elgin on Wednesday, Aug. 22.

District U-46 school year off to solid beginning

By Seth Hancock

The start of the 2018-19 school year was a success according to School District U-46 officials.

The Board of Education was given an update on school readiness at its Aug. 6 meeting, prior to the first day of classes on Wednesday, Aug. 15 (preschool starts this week on Wednesday, Aug. 22), and again updated on Monday, Aug. 20 after classes began.

U-46 CEO Tony Sanders said “overall, it was a great first day back” and the midweek start to classes provided an easier transition and it “works a lot better than starting on a Monday.”

Melanie Meidel, assistant superintendent of human resources, said that classes were fully staffed for the first week which she called a “miraculous event.” She said there’s still ongoing hiring but with some long-term substitutes classes are staffed.

There is still a need for 14 classroom teachers and 7.5 related service personnel (social workers, guidance councilors, etc.) according to Meidel and retirees have been called to try and help fill some of the open positions. She said that numbers are continually monitored, and “we want to make sure that students are in the seat before we commit to adding or decreasing in a classroom.”

There’s also some open paraprofessional positions needing to be filled as well as some bus drivers according to Meidel. Sanders said regarding bus drivers that they’re “getting harder and harder to fill as the economy’s turned around. It’s harder to compete for people.”

Board member John Deveroux asked how the district stood in terms of hiring compared to prior years to which Meidel said the district had been behind a week prior to the Aug. 6 meeting, but over that week they wound up ahead compared to previous years.

Josh Carpenter, assistant superintendent for teaching and learning, said there were four days of professional development, two for elementary teachers and two for secondary, held at Elgin Community College leading up to the first day of class. He said there was also a new teacher orientation held for “focusing on professional relationships, planning and preparation, professional responsibilities in the classroom environment.”

“The intention was to provide an introduction to U-46 to individual buildings, to departments and programs and to our staff,” Carpenter said. “Our staff and new teachers will be in contact throughout the year.”

Suzanne Johnson, deputy superintendent of instruction, said that over 200 students received free health exams through free clinics. She said by the end of the first week of classes there were fewer than 230 students excluded across the district for not having the proper medical and immunization paperwork.

Last year, the district following a first day exclusion for students not immunized was a hot topic with both board members Veronica Noland and Jeanette Ward leading the way against the first day exclusion. Noland asked how many students were excluded this year from the first day, but Johnson said she would have to get back to

Board ratifies resolution for U-46 surety bond

By Seth Hancock

The Board of Education in School District U-46 voted 7-0 on a resolution approving a surety bond of treasurer at its meeting on Monday, Aug. 6.

The district purchases the surety bond annually but this is the first time such a resolution has been brought to the board, according to district officials, during the board discussion.

Board member Jeanette Ward said she had not seen this before and asked for an explanation of the surety bond.

Jeff King, chief operating officer, said that "by state law, the school district has to bond the treasurer." He said the bonds amount is determined by 25 percent of the highest average fund balance during the year.

"Historically, that has never come to the school board," King said. "It's just a law, you have to buy the bond. In this particular instance, DuPage County contacted us about 10 days ago with a list of documents that they demand we have which has never happened."

Previously, the district has always sent copies of the bond to the three counties (Cook, DuPage, Kane) in U-46's boundaries to follow state law, but "in this case, (DuPage) wanted resolutions.... None of the counties required it, or at least to our knowledge they never have until now."

The surety bond was executed with the Ohio Casualty Insurance Company in early July, according to the resolution, and King is listed at the principal.

Ward asked for a clarification on the purpose of the bond and if it's "like an insurance policy in case we don't pay our bills?"

Dale Burnidge, director of financial operations, said: "I don't know that I would say it's if we don't pay the bills, it's more to secure the cash of the fund balance"

Ward asked: "It's not that it's issuing new debt, it's like an insurance policy?"

"It's an insurance policy," King said. "That's exactly what it is."

Board member Phil Costello, who is a public administrator for a park district, said "it's similar" to an insurance policy but it's "probably more of a letter of confidence." He asked about the surety bond's cost to U-46?

King did not have the exact amount at the meeting and said he'd follow up, but "I think this year's was just over $50,000."

The board also approved, by a 7-0 vote, the Fiscal Year 2019 Northern Kane County Regional Vocational System budget that evening. That budget is in balance with $1.8 million in expenditures and revenues.

Amendment of minutes marks Fire Dist. meeting

By Joe Hyland

Approval of meeting minutes for most governmental bodies is usually a fairly mundane task. Any modifications are usually in the realm of what amounts to housekeeping such as the spelling of a name, or the correction of a date or time. Such was not the case, however, during the Wednesday, Aug. 15 meeting of the Fire Protection District Board of Trustees when Trustee Jay Langfelder requested that the open session minutes from the Wednesday, July 18 meeting be removed from the consent agenda.

At the July 18 meeting, following a lengthy closed door session, the board approved 2.5 percent raises for firefighters, officers and administrative staff. The closed door session apparently grew contentious as the sound of raised voices could be heard during the closed-door session.

Following a return to open session, the vote was held on the raises.

Trustee Jay Langfelder voted against the 2.5 percent raises, saying each time that he supported a 2 percent increase. Langfelder said that the minutes did not reflect the fact that he was in favor of a 2 percent raise and therefore could be interpreted to mean that he opposed any raise at all.

Board President Jim McCarthy said that the issue had been discussed in open session, and he didn't understand why Langfelder wanted to amend the minutes.

Fire district Attorney Joe Miller reviewed the correction Langfelder wanted several times as Langfelder continually said his motion was for a 2 percent increase rather than modifying the minutes to say that he was for that increase. After some back and forth, the language for the amendment Langfelder was requesting was cleared up and passed via a 4-1 vote with McCarthy voting against.

McCarthy said he voted against it because he felt the motion was not clear.

the board on that number.

Johnson added that Chromebook computers have been fully distributed at two high schools while distribution is still ongoing at the remaining three high schools, and the former technology at U-46 high schools is being redistributed to elementary and middle schools. She also said the district has increased the number of assistant principals at elementary and middle schools.

Jeff King, deputy superintendent of operations, said that summer construction was complete by the first day of class when asked by board member Sue Kerr.

"We only have a 10-week window during the summer and there's a lot of things that get done in that 10 weeks," King said of the operations and maintenance work.

King said that 145 lunch tables had been distributed and over 5,000 desks and chairs delivered. He said a new food center will allow for increased options and higher quality food, and a call center has been added to the transportation department to handle the added call load for the start of the year.

The district has also stopped sending cards with bus routes to parents but instead provide the routes on Infinite Campus this year King said.

The start of school also comes with some sad kids as their summer vacation ends. Ward said she volunteered at Bartlett's Hawk Hollow Elementary School on the first day and Kerr did the same at Carol Stream's Spring Trail Elementary School, both saying there were some tears from students but overall it was a good experience.

Kerr said that she visited a few more schools on the first day along with Deveroux and Sanders.

A View from the Cheap Seats

The Imperfections
By Rich Trzupek
Grim news out of Pennsylvania last week. Another apparent sexual abuse scandal and apparent attempts to cover up the scandal by its hierarchy rocked the Catholic Church. Sadly, we seem to have seen a quantum increase in sexual abuse reports in recent years, from places of dubious moral character like Hollywood, to places that are held to a much higher moral standard, like Rome.

As a proud and practicing Catholic, I am of course distressed by this latest example of my church's human failings. At the same time, I understand that my church is a human institution and, like all human institutions, is subject to the human failings and the fragility of the people who comprise its congregation and leadership.

I don't expect my church to be perfect. Indeed, if I believed it to be perfect, then it would have no need of my active participation. As it stands, I believe that I am an active participant in a movement that – while flawed as is any human interaction – is overwhelmingly a force for good in a troubled world. I am an active Catholic because I want to make my church better, not because I believe my church is a perfect hang out.

We apply the same principle to many other parts of our lives. We affiliate ourselves with a particular political party, even though every party has suffered scandal and scoundrels. We love our families, though rare is the family that does not include at least one person whom causes us distress or embarrassment. We possess the ability, in other words, to see past the failings of the few – in any context – and appreciate the greater good of the many. More importantly, we are able to comprehend the tremendous good that the forms the foundation of the mission of the many in any institution dedicated to improving and advancing our shared existence.

More is expected of religion than other institutions. I understand why. Religion attempts to answer the most profound questions of all: Why are we here?; Where did we come from?; Where are we going? Those questions define existence. They are a hell of a lot more significant in the grand scheme of things than whether the political candidate you chose to support will raise or lower your property taxes while demanding more or less accountability from the school district that receives that income.

I believe that it is precisely because humans, at their core, know that questions of faith are so important and meaningful that their natural instinct as time goes on is to dismiss all religions as "superstition." It's far easier to wave off the profound questions as either unimportant, or matters that reason and science will eventually solve, than it is to consider the uncomfortable possibility that a Power beyond our understanding might be trying to send us a message.

In my considered opinion, the Catholic Church is, and always has been, an overwhelming force for good in a troubled world. In my opinion, the Catholic Church has been delivering important messages about a portion of existence we mere mortals can't comprehend in this life. I deplore the church's mistakes, its unjust prosecutions and persecutions, and its misuse of the considerable power it wields and has wielded.

But, for all of that, I would draw your attention to one Catholic institution that my parish – Holy Family Catholic Community in Inverness – introduced to me this Sunday: "Nuestros Pequeños Hermanos" – in English: "Our Little Brothers and Sisters", or "NPH."

NPH was founded in 1954 by an American priest by the name of Father William Wasson. Father Wasson took in a poor, starving Mexican boy accused of stealing from the poor box in a village church. He helped this improvised child, and scores like him. The organization he founded, NPH, has provided succor and support to over 21,000 poor children in Latin American nations who desperately needed help.

I do not, for a moment, disparage or discount the pain and suffering of the children who were hurt and betrayed in Pennsylvania. We can, and we must, do better. But – at the same time – I am immensely proud of the healing and inclusive work that Catholic organizations like NPH and Catholic Charities are engaged in.

South Elgin volleyball has difficult act to follow

By Seth Hancock
The South Elgin volleyball team, coming off its best season in program history, has high hopes for the 2018 season.

The Storm went 26-8 overall and 4-1 in the Upstate Eight Conference Valley Division, and captured its first three invite wins. The UEC will drop the divisions this seasons now with 10 teams after the departure of four programs and addition of one, Glenbard South.

"The team's goal in the conference is to play each team to the best of our ability," said South Elgin coach Joni Plach. "Overall, our goals are to finish high at tournament play. Last year we won first place in three of our four varsity tournaments."

Plach added: "To be successful the team needs to work on communication, confidence in play and being aggressive."

South Elgin did lose a lot of players to graduation, including a pair of all-conference honorees in Casie Swanson and Libby Vadrine, but it does also return a lot of experience.

Some key returners are four-year varsity starters seniors Hayley Fisher and McKayla Geraghty as well as three-year varsity starter junior Angelina Negron.

"Last year we had our best season in school history with 26 wins," Plach said. "I graduated seven seniors, however a lot of the team this year was on that successful team and contributed to the wins. The girls know what it takes to win matches."

Plach added: "This year the team has a lot of varsity experience. We have several seniors that have been on varsity since their freshmen year. Overall the team is very mature in their volleyball play and there will be no surprises to them."

The Storm open the season at home for a nonconference match against Schaumburg on Friday, Aug. 24.

U-46 Board given annual salary, benefits report

By Seth Hancock

The Board of Education in School District U-46 was presented with an annual salary and benefits report for district teachers and administrators at its meeting on Monday, Aug. 6.

The total salaries and benefits presented equated to $216.3 million which does not include all employees as $367.4 million was budgeted in Fiscal Year 2018. There are 888 employees in the district receiving six-figures between base salaries, benefits and retirement according to the data.

U-46 CEO Tony Sanders said that state law, under Public Act 097-0256, “requires school districts to report to (Illinois State Board of Education)... on or before October 1st of each year the base salary and benefits of all administrators and teachers employed by the district and to present to the board at a school board meeting.”

No action from the board is needed according to Sanders.

Sanders also responded to a request made before the meeting by board member Jeanette Ward who asked for the raw data in a spreadsheet rather than the PDF file that was presented.

“This is not data that we maintain in a spreadsheet in U-46,” Sanders said. “All this information is loaded from our HR and fiscal officers into the state’s employment information system, and they spit the report back to us in a PDF format.”

Ward replied: “Well, does the state have it in a spreadsheet and then convert it to a PDF? It just looks like it came from a spreadsheet. It looks like the state had a spreadsheet and converted it to a PDF.”

Sanders said that “they probably do, but when you asked today we did not have a copy of that today. We would have to FOIA (Freedom of Information Act) that from the state.”

Board member Sue Kerr asked if the data included additional funds such as coaching stipends to which Melanie Meidel, assistant superintendent of human resources, said: “No, they just request the base and it also doesn’t include every employee. It’s a certain category.”

Meidel said it only includes certified administrators, not classified administrators, as well as classroom teachers. She said staff such as social workers or guidance councilors are not included.

Board member Phil Costello suggested in a recent blog post that while the district is providing the bare minimum required under state law, the public deserves greater transparency on how their tax dollars are spent with regards to salaries and benefits.

Costello wrote: “Personnel expenses represent $367M (70 [percent]) of our $518M budget. The $7.9M budget increase from fiscal 2017 and the forecasted 2.4 [percent] annual increases over the next three years in personnel expenses have not registered a single comment from the Board or public. On our website, we only disclose the prior year’s teacher and administrator personnel expenses to meet public statutory mandates, however, the total is only 57 [percent] of the budget. There is no explanation of the nature of the exclusions or scope of what comprises the balance of $156M gap for public scrutiny.”

The board was also presented with, at the meeting, a quarterly financial report for secondary schools for the fourth quarter. Dale Burnidge, director of financial operations, said the quarter ran from April 1 through June 30 and it totaled $3.5 million, a $768,117 decrease from the previous quarter which he said is “pretty typical for the fourth quarter of the year.”

“The balances have decreased for most of the schools and that’s mainly due to the schools remitting instructional material fees, athletic participation fees and parking permit fees collected at the schools back to the district,” Burnidge said.

The report includes the fund balances of various clubs at secondary schools and Ward asked: “If a club existed but now they have a zero balance, will they not appear in this report? I noticed there’s one line item for donations that’s zero.”

Burnidge said: “If there was no activity, I don’t think it would be in here.”

Ward further asked if a club exists but has no fund balance that club would not be in the report and Burnidge said that was correct.

High hopes for new year exist for Hawks volleyball

By Seth Hancock

The Bartlett volleyball team has high hopes for the 2018 season.

The Hawks finished last year 13-21 overall, 1-4 in the Upstate Eight Conference Valley Division.

Aimee Riddle, Bartlett’s assistant varsity coach and JV head coach, said the Hawks hope to be competitive in a newly aligned UEC which drops divisions this year with the departure of four teams and addition of one.

“With all the changes in the conference this year, we hope to have a very strong showing in the Upstate Eight,” Riddle said. “I feel like we have a very good chance of finishing in the top of the conference, and I hope that we are able to advance further than before in the regionals and sectionals play.”

The Hawks return three-year varsity outside hitter senior Emily Baggot and junior middle blocker Isabella Diaz, both all-conference last year, as well as two-year varsity libero senior Samantha Martino, an all-conference honorable mention. A key newcomer is freshman setter Madison Hankins.

“This year’s varsity team is incredibly strong all around,” Riddle said. “We have a number of returning varsity players as well as a group of seven seniors that are natural leaders and have a level of enthusiasm that we have not had in the past.”

Riddle added: “The ladies need to really focus on tapping into their full potential to excel beyond their previous levels of volleyball. They have the right attitudes and skills, but it will be finding a perfect balance of fun and hard work that will make us the most successful we can be throughout the season.”

Bartlett begins the season on the road with a nonconference match against Willowbrook on Wednesday, Aug. 22, and the Hawks are eager to play.

“This year’s varsity team has a lot of seasoned players,” Riddle said. “Their experience and confidence is something that we are extremely excited to tap into as we begin the season. Also, the entire group has an energy that I have never seen before.”

Riddle added: “We have a solid front row of attackers and our blockers are really strong at the net. We have a freshman (Hankins) that is already proving herself at the varsity level. The varsity group of ladies is a tight-knit group and they work very well together as a unit. They anticipate each other’s moves and communicate very well on the court.”

Fermilab accelerator complex to receive powerful upgrade project

Fermilab’s accelerator complex has achieved a major milestone: The U.S. Department of Energy formally approved Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory to proceed with its design of PIP-II, an accelerator upgrade project that will provide increased beam power to generate an unprecedented stream of neutrinos — subatomic particles that could unlock our understanding of the universe — and enable a broad program of physics research for many years to come.

The PIP-II (Proton Improvement Plan II) accelerator upgrades are integral to the Fermilab-hosted Deep Underground Neutrino Experiment (DUNE), which is the largest international science experiment ever to be conducted on U.S. soil. DUNE requires enormous quantities of neutrinos to study the mysterious particle in exquisite detail and, with the latest approval for PIP-II, Fermilab is positioned to be the world leader in accelerator-based neutrino research. The Long-Baseline Neutrino Facility (LBNF), which will also support DUNE, had its groundbreaking ceremony in July 2017.

The opportunity to contribute to PIP-II has drawn scientists and engineers from around the world to Fermilab: PIP-II is the first accelerator project on U.S. soil that will have significant contributions from international partners. Fermilab’s PIP-II partnerships include institutions in India, Italy, France and the UK, as well as the United States.

PIP-II capitalizes on recent particle accelerator advances developed at Fermilab and other institutions that will allow its accelerators to generate particle beams at higher powers than previously available. The high-power particle beams will, in turn, create intense neutrino beams, providing scientists with an abundance of these subtle particles.

“PIP-II’s high-power accelerators and its national and multinational partnerships reinforce Fermilab’s position as the accelerator-based neutrino physics capital of the world,” said DOE Undersecretary for Science Paul Dabbar. “LBNF/DUNE, the Fermilab-based megascience experiment for neutrino research, has already attracted more than 1,000 collaborators from 32 countries. With the accelerator side of the experiment ramping up in the form of PIP-II, not only does Fermilab attract collaborators worldwide to do neutrino science, but U.S. particle physics also gets a powerful boost.”

The Department of Energy’s Argonne and Lawrence Berkeley national laboratories are also major PIP-II participants.

The DOE milestone is formally called Critical Decision 1 approval, or CD-1. In granting CD-1, DOE approves Fermilab’s approach and cost range. The milestone marks the completion of the project definition phase and the conceptual design. The next step is to move the project toward establishing a performance baseline.

“We think of PIP-II as the heart of Fermilab: A platform that provides multiple capabilities and enables broad scientific programs, including the most powerful accelerator-based neutrino source in the world,” said Fermilab PIP-II Project Director Lia Merminga. “With the go-ahead to refine our blueprint, we can focus designing the PIP-II accelerator complex to be as powerful and flexible as it can possibly be.”

Neutrinos are ubiquitous yet fleeting particles, the most difficult to capture of all of the members of the subatomic particle family. Scientists capture them by sending neutrino beams generated from particle accelerators to large, stories-high detectors. The greater the number of neutrinos sent to the detectors, the greater the chances the detectors will catch them, and the more opportunity there is to study these subatomic escape artists.

That’s where PIP-II comes in.

Fermilab’s upgraded PIP-II accelerator complex will generate proton beams of significantly greater power than is currently available. The increase in beam power translates into more neutrinos that can be sent to the lab’s various neutrino experiments. The result will be the world’s most intense high-energy neutrino beam.

The goal of PIP-II is to produce a proton beam of more than 1 megawatt, about 60 percent higher than the existing accelerator complex supplies. Eventually, enabled by PIP-II, Fermilab could upgrade the accelerator to double that power to more than 2 megawatts.

“At that power, we can just flood the detectors with neutrinos,” said DUNE co-spokesperson and University of Chicago physicist Ed Blucher. “That’s what so exciting. Every neutrino that stops in our detectors adds a bit of information to our picture of the universe. And the more neutrinos that stop, the closer we get to filling in the picture.”

The largest and most ambitious of these detectors are those in DUNE, which is scheduled to start up in the mid-2020s. DUNE will use two detectors separated by a distance of 800 miles (1,300 kilometers) — one at Fermilab and a second, much larger detector situated one mile underground in South Dakota at the Sanford Underground Research Facility. Prototypes of those technologically advanced neutrino detectors are now under construction at the European particle physics laboratory CERN, which is a major partner in LBNF/DUNE, and are expected to take data later this year.

Fermilab’s accelerators, enhanced according to the PIP-II plan, will send a beam of neutrinos to the DUNE detector at Fermilab. The beam will continue its path straight through Earth’s crust to the detector in South Dakota. Scientists will study the data gathered by both detectors, comparing them to get a better handle on how neutrino properties change over the long distance.

The detector located in South Dakota, known as the DUNE far detector, is enormous. It will stand four stories high and occupy an area equivalent to a soccer field. With its supporting platform LBNF, DUNE is designed to handle a neutrino deluge.

And, with the cooperation of international partners, PIP-II is designed to deliver it.

The development of a major particle accelerator with international participation represents a new paradigm in U.S. accelerator projects: PIP-II is the first U.S.-based accelerator project with multinational partners. Currently these include laboratories in India (BARC, IUAC, RRCAT, VECC) and institutions funded in Italy by the National Institute for Nuclear Physics (INFN), France (CEA and IN2P3), and in the UK by the Science and Technology Facilities Council (STFC).

In an agreement with India, four Indian Department of Atomic Energy institutions are authorized to contribute equipment, with details to be formalized in advance of the start of construction.

“The international scientific community brings world-leading expertise and capabilities to the project. Their engagement and shared sense of ownership in the project’s success are among the most compelling strengths of PIP-II,” Merminga said.

PIP-II partners contribute accelerator components, pursuing their development jointly with Fermilab through regular exchanges of scientists and engineers.

The collaboration is mutually beneficial. For some international partners, this collaboration presents an opportunity for development of their own facilities and infrastructure as well as local accelerator industry. Accelerating superconducting technology.

The centerpiece of the PIP-II project is the construction of a new superconducting radio-frequency (SRF) linear accelerator, which will become the initial stage of the upgraded Fermilab accelerator chain. It will replace the current Fermilab Linac. (“Linac” is a common abbreviation for “linear accelerator,” in which the particle beam proceeds along a straight path.) The plan is to install the SRF linac under 25 feet of dirt in the infield of the now decommissioned Tevatron ring.

The new SRF linac will provide a big boost to its particle beam from the get-go, doubling the beam energy of its predecessor from 400 million to 800 million electronvolts. That boost will enable the Fermilab accelerator complex to achieve megawatt-scale beam power.

Superconducting materials carry zero electrical resistance, so current sails through them effortlessly. By taking advantage of superconducting components, accelerators minimize the amount of power they draw from the power grid, channeling more of it to the beam. Beams thus achieve higher energies at less cost than in normal-conducting accelerators, such as Fermilab’s current Linac.

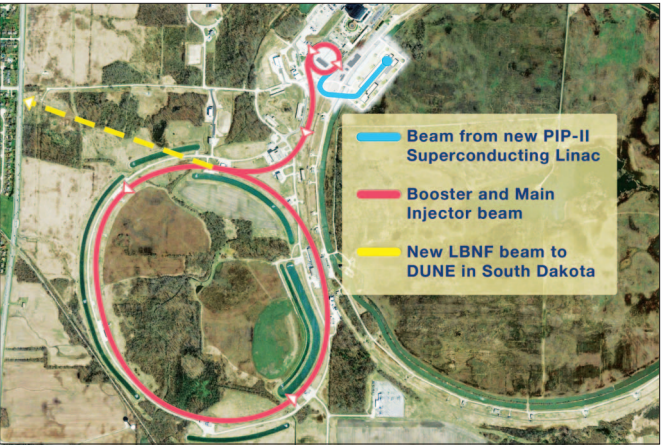

In the linac, superconducting components called accelerating cavities will impart energy to the particle beam. The cavities, which look like strands of jumbo, silver pearls, are made of niobium and will be lined up end to end. The particle beam will accelerate down the axis of one cavity after another, picking up energy as it goes.

“Fermilab is one of the pioneers in superconducting accelerator technology,” Merminga said. “Many of the advances developed here are going into the PIP-II SRF linac.”

The linac cavities will be encased in 25 cylindrical cryomodules, which house cryogenics to keep the cavities cold (to maintain superconductivity).

Many current and future particle accelerators are based on superconducting technology, and the advances that help scientists study neutrinos have multiplying effects outside fundamental science. Researchers are developing superconducting accelerators for medicine, environmental cleanup, quantum computing, industry and national security.

In PIP-II, a beam of protons will be injected into the linac. Over the course of its 176 meters — six-and-a-half Olympic-size pool lengths — the beam will accelerate to an energy of 800 million electronvolts. Once it passes through the superconducting linac, it will enter the rest of Fermilab’s current accelerator chain — a further three accelerators — which will also undergo significant upgrades over the next few years to handle the higher-energy beam from the new linac. By the time the beam exits the final accelerator, it will have an energy of up to 120 billion electronvolts and more than 1 megawatt of power.

After the proton beam exits the chain, it will strike a segmented cylinder of carbon. The beam-carbon collision will create a shower of other particles, which will be routed to various Fermilab experiments. Some of these post-collision particles will become — will “decay into,” in physics lingo — neutrinos, which will hit this point already be on the path toward their detectors.

PIP-II’s initial proton beam — which scientists will be able to distribute between LBNF/DUNE and other experiments — can be delivered in pulses or as a continuous proton stream.

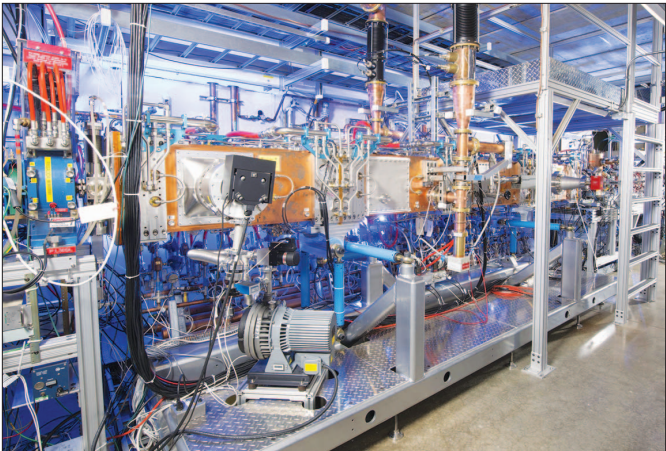

The front-end components for PIP-II — those upstream from the superconducting linac — are already developed and undergoing testing.

“We are very happy to have been able to design PIP-II to meet the requirements of the neutrino program while providing flexibility for future development of the Fermilab experimental program in any number of directions,” said Fermilab’s Steve Holmes, former PIP-II project director.

Fermilab expects to complete the project by the mid-2020s, in time for the startup of LBNF/DUNE.

“Many people worked tirelessly to design the best machine for the science we want to do,” Merminga said. “The recognition of their excellent work through CD-1 approval is encouraging for us. We look forward to building this forefront accelerator.”

Department of Energy funding for the project is provided through DOE’s Office of Science.

Bike advocate lists need for business park trail

By Seth Hancock

A member of the village's bike and run plan advisory committee would like to see the Board of Trustees support building out more bike trails in Bartlett.

Terry Witt addressed the board during the town hall at its meeting on Tuesday, July 17, and he raised Chicago Metropolitan Agency for Planning's (CMAP) On to 2050 future vision plan for the region. He said he believes the village could qualify for CMAP grants to help build bike paths.

Currently there is no bike path leading to the Brewster Creek Business Park which is west of Illinois Route 59 according to Witt who said in the future that park will have "trees, trails and vibrant businesses, and it's going to be an important part of what's going on in Bartlett."

As global investors fly into O'Hare Airport to consider investing in businesses in the region, Witt said they will rent bikes and travel through DuPage County but when "they get to 59, they stop."

"They stop because the trail stops at 59," Witt said. "It doesn't go anywhere. Well, maybe they Uber from there or maybe they stop at the Elk Grove (Village) Business Park, the Roselle Business Park or the Mallard Lake Business Park."

Witt said that there are about 100,000 bike riders in the region who are unable to get to the Brewster Creek Business Park and he said building more paths will help businesses, and he suggested the board put pressure on some area officials in DuPage County.

There's been a plan from DuPage County to build a bike path past Route 59 since at least 2014 according to Witt, who along with supporting more bike paths, also supports adding a bike sharing program at the Tri County State Park.

"We've got equipment and materials sitting right there in Brewster Creek," Witt said. "Let's build a trail. By the way, we want to call it the Brewster Creek Trail, and we want that Brewster Creek Trail on the visitor's map. We want to be on the map."

Witt added: "At the end of all of that, kind of I guess it's up to the village board to say 'yeah, we want a Brewster Creek Trail. Yeah, we want a way for our residents to be able to ride between the community center and the nature center and stop at 59 and have an ice cream cone at one of those (businesses).'"

Along with supporting more bike paths, Witt also congratulated Village

President Kevin Wallace's son and friends who completed a nine-day fundraising bike ride earlier this summer to Niagara Falls in New York. Austin Hilvert, Tyler Klatt, Will Rajewski and Brenner Wallace all made the trip.

"They learned a lot of things that can go wrong on a long bike ride," Kevin Wallace joked, "but they made it."

Rotary Club exhibit shows historic impact of polio

Iron lungs were used widely in America and other countries decades ago to keep many polio victims alive. The Rotary Club of Bartlett is providing a real iron lung to educate residents about this terrible disease and the massive progress made toward its global eradication. (Courtesy photo)

The Rotary Club of Bartlett will portray polio's terrible effects and global devastation by displaying a real iron lung, used widely in America in the 1940s and 1950s to keep many victims alive. An exhibit will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Bartlett Depot Museum during Heritage Days.

Polio was the most widely feared disease in America and other nations in the mid-twentieth century. Hundreds of thousands of children were killed or crippled across 125 nations every year and American parents panicked over ways to protect their youngsters. Relief only came with invention of the Salk and Sabin vaccines, where near-universal immunization eventually slashed the number of victims and helped eradicate the disease from the Americas in 1994. Similar efforts worldwide have reduced the number of wild polio virus cases to only 12 this year in Pakistan and Afghanistan.

This worldwide public health campaign was developed by Rotary International, whose members brought vaccines to many nations and personally contributed in excess of $1.7 billion over the decades. Rotary has since been joined by the World Health Organization, UNICEF, U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the Bill & Melinda Gates Organization and many countries. Together, they mobilized global support, immunized 2.5 billion children and brought polio to the brink of eradication. Massive efforts today are hoping to totally end the polio scourge.

The Rotary Club of Bartlett recognizes that polio has not been completely wiped out and transmission can still happen via a disease carrier flying here from an affected region. Rotarians are portraying the terrible history, its local connection to Bartlett history, and the vast successes toward eradication since the 1950s.

Expectations set high for Bartlett football season

By Seth Hancock

With a new coach, Matt Erlenbaugh, and playing in a newly aligned Upstate Eight Conference, the Bartlett football team has high expectations entering the 2018 season.

The Hawks are coming off a 2-7 season last year, 2-3 in the UEC Valley Division. This year, four programs have departed the UEC and one joined, Glenbard South, as the conference will no longer include divisions.

"The goal for this season is a conference championship," Erlenbaugh said. "I know that is a difficult goal with some great programs in the conference, but we have a lot of talent on our team and if we continue to work like we have been and go 1-0 every single day in practice, we have a real shot."

Erlenbaugh added: "For the season goal, making the playoffs is nice however we want to make a run deep into the playoffs. In order to do this we have to focus one practice, one play, one quarter, one game at a time. If we are able to accomplish this, the scoreboard will take care of itself."

The Hawks will return a strong core including a pair of all-conference recipients from last year, seniors Austin Gates (wide receiver/safety) and Jason Schuberth (linebacker/fullback). Other key returners include seniors

Mohamed Abdelhafez (offensive lineman), Nick Deckard (running back/linebacker), Nicholas Eckelberry (free safety) and Spencer Konstanzer (linebacker/fullback).

Some key newcomers are senior Jonah O'Brien (quarterback) and juniors Tony DeRosa (linebacker) and Mathew Young (wide receiver) as well as sophomores Hayden Angell (wide receiver), Charlie Nicoll (defensive lineman) and Alec Palella (tight end/linebacker).

Erlenbaugh has identified some of his team's strengths on both sides of the ball and said the key will be learning to play through adversity.

"Offensively we will establish the run game, control the line of scrimmage which will open up our pass game," Erlenbaugh said. "Defensively our effort, attitude and desire to create takeaways will win us games."

Erlenbaugh added: "Adversity is the only thing that is guaranteed. But with adversity comes opportunity. We need to learn to overcome difficult situations. Keep our focus on the next play and compete on every snap."

Bartlett will open the season on the road at East Aurora for an UEC game on Friday, Aug. 24. The Hawks are also tapped to play all four home games at its new stadium on campus starting in Week 2 against Glenbard East.

A good pill to swallow as collection effort hits milestone

The DuPage County Health Department's medication take-back program, known as RxBOX, recently reached a collection milestone, following the drop-off by local police departments of unwanted, expired or unused medications.

On Friday, Aug. 17, officials dropped-off 4,957 pounds of medications, bringing the total to 101,165 pounds collected (roughly the weight of 25 average passenger cars) since the program was launched in 2009.

The success of the RxBOX program is in the totals, with more than 10,000 pounds collected in 2012, and over 12,000 pounds each year since.

"This was accomplished through the partnership between residents, law enforcement and public health officials of DuPage County," said Health Department Executive Director Karen Ayala. "We applaud the remarkable community response to RxBOX, as we work to reduce the risk of unused medication falling into the wrong hands."

In its Framework, the DuPage County Heroin Opioid Prevention and Education (HOPE) Taskforce identified the importance of reducing access to prescription drugs by promoting the

Storm football looking to build on past successes

By Seth Hancock

Under a new coach, Dragan Teonic, and in a newly aligned Upstate Eight Conference, the South Elgin football team seeks more success in the 2018 season. The Storm went 8-2 last year with the program’s fourth postseason appearance and finished 5-0 to capture its second UEC Valley Division title. With the departure of four teams and addition of one, the 10-team UEC will no longer include divisions this season. Teonic replaces Pat Pistorio who guided the Storm to a 29-19 record over five seasons. Teonic’s goal is to continue that success, and he’s identified some key factors to achieve that success. “Our goal is to win the conference, as it will be every year,” Teonic said. “We want to maximize what our team is capable of doing every season. We want to leave the field knowing we did all we could for each other.” Teonic added: “Right now our focus is on discipline, toughness and effort. We have shown various levels of those three core values and we need to become more consistent. We’re a very young team, but we have the ability to maximize our success if we continue to work at a fanatical level.” Some key returners this season will be seniors Pat Noworol (wide receiver/defensive back), Royce Robinson (kicker) and Azxavier Salinas (athlete/defensive back) as well as junior Vince Clinite (running back/linebacker) and sophomore Davion Cherwin (wide receiver/defensive back). Some key newcomers will be seniors Parker Frey (wide receiver/defensive back) and Jacob Johnson (quarterback) and juniors Leo Aguirre (running back/linebacker), Calin Gurau (wide receiver/linebacker), Chris Mejia (wide receiver/defensive back) and Sam Robles (running back/linebacker). Key players up front on both the offensive and defensive lines will be senior Cody Naida and juniors Andy Koch and Vince Tringali. “On offense, our strength will be our quickness and athleticism at all 11 positions,” Teonic said. “This is the first team I’ve ever coached that was extremely athletic at every offensive position, including the offensive line. We’re not very big up front, but we move well.” Teonic added: “On defense, our strength will be the linebacking core group. We have some depth and ability there, but we’re working hard to increase our depth and toughness. Our defensive backfield will be athletic, but our defensive line is a work in progress.” South Elgin opens the season at home for an UEC contest against West Chicago on Saturday, Aug. 25.

Top actors from Illinois selected as part of Illinois Top 20 project

He was Rob Petrie, Bert the Chimney Sweep, Caractacus Potts and countless other characters. Now Dick Van Dyke’s latest role is top actor in Illinois history, as chosen by voters in the Illinois Top 200 project. Van Dyke, who grew up in Danville, was followed by Bill Murray of “Ghostbusters” and “Groundhog Day” fame and two-time Oscar winner Gene Hackman, a fellow Danville native. # Charitable Summer Fest offers various attractions

Four different food trucks were lined up to feed hungry participants.

Story and photos by Joe Hyland

While the final numbers aren't yet in, indications point to a successful run for the Bartlett Summer Fest at Bartlett Park this year.

The fest, which is run by the Bartlett firefighters charity Ignite the Courage, was expanded this year. Last year's event was a Saturday-only affair, while this year's also ran on Friday evening, Aug. 10.

One of the big draws for the event was a car show that attracted 93 entries. Fire District Trustee Don Wisniewski said that the show, which ran from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 11, was awesome.

The entries in the show were not only local, but included people from other communities such as Lake in the Hills resident Mike Saenz, who showed his 1948 Chevy 3600 pickup truck.

"We picked up the Best Truck Award," said Saenz.

Another change this year was the addition of a craft show featuring 25 vendors offering various hand-made items.

"No smiling allowed," said District Board President Jim McCarthy, who was selling tickets, teased a little girl who appeared to be unsure about whether or not he was serious.

The fest had a number of things that were definitely geared towards the younger set, including a pony ride and an inflatable slide that was, oddly enough, in the shape of a fire truck.

The idea behind the fest was first to raise money for the Ignite the Courage charity.

"All the money we raise goes right back into the community," firefighter Nick McLeod said, who spearheaded the committee organizing the event.

One of the ways it was hoped the event would raise funds was through a silent auction that featured a wide variety of items. Some of the items, such as a goalie mask autographed by former Chicago Blackhawk Tony Esposito, were fairly popular judging by the number of bids. Some others, such as a set of four one-way airline tickets on Southwest Airlines and football helmets autographed by Brian Urlacher and Mike Singletary were not as openly popular. To be fair, however, the helmets had starting bids of $400 each.

Like any good fest, this one had food and beverages. The food was provided by four different food trucks in addition to a stand. Non-alcoholic beverages could be had there as well. For something more adult, one needed to go to the beer tent. There, one could choose from three different American or India pale ales as well as a hard lemonade beverage.

Chief Mike Falese could be found working behind the counter at the beer tent. He said he was happy with the turnout.

"We had a good night last night, and it's been a busy day today," Falese said.

An inflatable slide, oddly enough in the shape of a fire truck, was available for children to enjoy.

Lake in the Hills resident Mike Saenz won the best truck award at Saturday's car show, with his 1948 Chevy 3600 pickup truck.

Alabaster, a psychedelic blues rock jam band from McHenry, performed for the crowd.

This year's Bartlett Summer Fest included a craft show.
